Overview

1. CLIL: Whatever happened to the Ls in CLIL?
2. To learn or to acquire? That is the question!
3. What language is it anyway?
4. Well, then let’s take it with a pinch of SALT.
Qualitative studies on target language teaching in CLIL:

- Mostly language learning through providing an input-rich context, implicit, language bath;
- No (hardly any) planned language instruction, no specific language goals;
- Language learning is a by product of content teaching:

WHATEVER happened to the Ls in CLIL?
About language and learning - 1

- T2: I just say, okay I’m not your language teacher, I am in this sense, I will not check on anyone’s language knowledge in the classical sense, I will tell the students that I am not a trained language teacher, and I’ll make, when speaking, also my own mistakes, but what’s important is that you keep talking, that is absolutely essential, and only through talking you learn the language.

- T1 “I might ruin something, I’m not someone who thinks he can do everything and this (being a language teacher) I can definitely not do”.

It takes two to tango: E-I; C-L

- There are not two separate objects, language as a system and language as a set of texts. The relationship between the two is analogous to that between the weather and the climate. …. The climate is the theory of the weather. Halliday & Matthiessen (2014)

- Content and language are interconnected as two sides of one coin. Llinares, A. (2015)

- Simply exposing learners to rich input, as is possible with some analytic approaches, e.g. the natural approach, ..., and some forms of immersion education, even in the context of authentic tasks, is insufficient. (Long, M. H. 2011)

- Second languages are not learned by osmosis, as decades of research studies in one-way immersion contexts have consistently shown (Cammarata, L., & Tedick, D. J., 2012).

About language and learning - 2

- CLIL is not primarily about the subject teacher’s additional responsibility to pay attention to language, but about the inherent role of language in teaching and learning. (Nikula, T., Dalton-Puffer, C., & Lorenzo, 2016).

- Learning happens through doing tasks. … The learning task is thus the core of any learning activity… And as each text unfolds, its language features may be explicitly reviewed and named as opportunities arise. (Rose and Martin, 2012)
The CLIL teaching challenge: Topic and task appropriate register

- Subject-related texts
  - are part of
  - School-related genres
    - expressed in
    - such as
      - Registers
        - General register
        - Academic register
        - Task-specific register
          - PREFER
            - Recipes
            - Instructions
            - auto/biography; personal experience
            - Historical recount
            - Connected information for how and why things work
            - Explanations
            - Fictional narrative
            - Imaginative stories
            - Persuade; argue
            - Connected information
            - Factual information
            - Report

Planning for writing through model texts

1. Choose a genre model text
2. Discuss the purpose of the text.
3. Point out genre-related register in text.
4. Reflect (read-aloud) why you find what register helpful and apply it to a graphic organiser (GO).
5. Evaluate a good and a bad example.
Strategic genre focused writing: Historical monuments (Troyan, 2013)

1. A title

2. An introductory sentence enticing the reader to learn more about the landmark, often in the form of a construction using the superlative.

3. A series of historical facts.

4. References to architectural detail.

5. A compelling reason and invitation to visit the site.

Alhambra – top choice palace in Granada

The Alhambra is Granada’s – and Europe’s – love letter to Moorish culture, a place where fountains trickle, leaves rustle, and ancient spirits seem to mysteriously linger. Part palace, part fort, part World Heritage site, part lesson in medieval architecture, the Alhambra has long enchanted a never-ending line of expectant visitors. As a historic monument, it is unlikely it will ever be surpassed – at least not in the lifetime of anyone reading this.

1. How to make the most of students’ L1 rather than seeing it as a handicap or deficit option?
2. How to exploit ALL languages in the classroom?

Putting principles into practice:
• Bilingual texts/crosswords/wordlists; compare and contrast; cognates; sandwich technique; translations, etc.
CLIL and L1

- Explain the most important points in L1 and carry out tasks in L2
- Bilingual mind maps
- Use L2 texts with L1 introduction and/or summary
- Gain information from L2 texts and analyse, discuss, evaluate them in L1
- Use language games bilingually, such as crosswords, memory, bingo
- Bilingual, visual support materials
- Create bilingual materials (L1/L2 version in wikipedia).
- Sandwich Technique: L2 > L1 > L2 (code-switching)
- The Art of Code-switching
- Google translations
- Suggestopedia/super learning: parallel texts
SALT: Multimodal Literacies

1. What modal potentials for meaning making are available in the texts?

2. How can I support the learning with other modes and media (visual, embodied, digital)?

3. How can they complement each other?

4. How does it affect students’ languaging?

Putting principles into practice:

- Graphic organizers; webQuests;
- miming games; using mobile devices; etc.
SALT: Target language use

1. How can I make my students aware of the particular register of my field?
2. How can I make my students notice the typical language demands of texts or tasks in my field?
3. How can I support students in their learning of keywords and their lexical associations?
4. How can I help students notice important differences between their L1s and the TL?
5. How can I sensitize them towards the large proportion of academic words (in English) and their Graeco-Latin origins (morphology work)?

Principles into practice:
- Internet corpora; web-based dictionaries; morphology work, HOT-discourse organizers

CLIL methodology books:

SALT: Balance your teaching through languaging

A language is a resource for making meaning, meaning resides in systematic patterns of choice ... text is a process of making meaning in context.

Thinking science and learning the language of science occurs simultaneously.

Learned attention limits the potential of implicit learning, and that is why explicit learning is necessary in L2 acquisition.

Language is the use of language to mediate cognition and affect.
